OPERATIONS AND PURPOSES OF THE ENERY. The withdrawal of GRAST from Jackson and Canton, and the movement of his forces both up and down the Mississippi river, have given rise to various conjectures as to his future purposes. The public carlealty on this point will also be enhanced by the telegraphic announcement to-day, that his forces will not be able to effect much for the next month or so on account of the extreme heat and their juded condition This may be true or it may be a ruse to cover up the apprehended movement of the enemy upon Mobile. If the weather is too hot to admit of operations against that city, it would seem reasonable that the same cause would puts of a step for the present to further operations against Charleston. Be this as it may, however, at is not at all improbable that the enemy will elevers the remainder of the summer months to the rest and reconstration of the armies, preparalory to a more vigorous attack upon us next fall, provided a truce is not in the meantime. agreed upon. Many of the Northern leaders eldowsty as the option to at the ownin is so far subjugated as to be willing to accept of peace upon almost any terms. They regard the fall of Vichsburg, which we held so long and with so much tonacity, as a signaling blow to the Cenfederacy. They attach to it a world of importance, and are plone to imagine that our despandency corresponds with their extravagant jubilations over the event, and it is not at all improbable, judging from present indications. that propositions of some sort for a peaceable settlement of our difficulties, will see long come from the Lincoln Government.
